The Morning Letter

With the compliments of the Editor, to Jonesboro, Brookland & neighbors

Sunday, the Eighth of November, 2026

Good morning,

A frosty start gives way to a bright, mild Sunday, the kind of November afternoon worth spending outdoors. The Red Wolves and the Razorbacks both came up short on Saturday, the country is still sorting out the midterm results, and the deer woods are at the doorstep of the rut. Here is the week's news, with the Sunday review at the end.

Rain, day	0%	0%	0%	32%	23%	0%	0%

The morning begins cold and cloudy near 36 degrees, with frost possible in low spots, then the clouds break by midday and the afternoon turns clear, warming to about 61. The evening stays clear and settles to near 48 by 9 o'clock, with an overnight low around 34.

Monday brings a sunnier, milder day with a high near 68, and Tuesday stays warm and dry. The first real chance of rain this week arrives Wednesday, with a high near 76 and about a one-in-three chance of showers, followed by a sharp cool-down: highs near 56 on Thursday and 48 on Friday.

The Almanac

First light	6:04 AM	Sunrise	6:32 AM
Solar noon	11:46 AM	Sunset	5:00 PM
Last light	5:27 PM	Length of day	10 h 28 m
Change from yesterday	−1 m 50 s	Moon	Waning Crescent, 5% lit

The moon is a hair-thin crescent in the east before dawn and slips toward new around tomorrow, so the nights this week will be as dark as they get, a fine time for looking at stars from a porch or a deer stand.

Out in the country the pecans are dropping and the squirrels are working the hickories; pecan shellers in the county are busy, and a bucket of nuts on the porch is the best sort of November chore. The winter wheat sown last month is a thin green haze across the cotton and soybean ground, and the ditch banks are turning the color of a worn penny. Overhead, the first long lines of geese and the occasional sandhill crane are passing down the Mississippi flyway, and on a still evening you can hear them before you see them.

In the garden, a hard frost is on its way sooner or later, so pull the last peppers, bring the potted rosemary near the door, and mulch the garlic you planted. Old saying (lore, not a forecast): "Clear moon, frost soon."

Teachers in Jonesboro schools receive $75,000 in classroom grants

The Jonesboro Public Schools Foundation, a nonprofit that raises money for the district, handed out $75,000 in classroom grants to 44 teachers on Friday. The foundation received 93 requests, so fewer than half could be funded; the grants reach teachers from pre-kindergarten through high school.

Carmen Teague, a drama and theater teacher in her fourth year at Douglas MacArthur High School, plans a project that links the stage to what students read in English and history, hoping that building costumes, sets and sound for a book will help students understand it better. Caroline Crawford, who teaches biomedical courses at Jonesboro High School, will use her grant to help students earn five to seven career-ready certifications, which prepare them for internships in their senior year. Jenny Beth McCallum, a former foundation president and Jonesboro High alumna, spoke about what the grants mean for students across the district.

Study asks whether the Delta should become a national heritage area

A draft feasibility study on whether eastern Arkansas should be designated a national historic area is open for public comment through December 11. The idea is to knit together communities, organizations and institutions across the Arkansas Delta to protect important historic and cultural sites, expand heritage tourism and strengthen the regional economy. Community leaders met at the Jonesboro Chamber of Commerce on Friday to review it, and the draft is posted on the Arkansas State University Heritage Sites website.

Adam Long, the group's executive director, said the process can take up to three years, and any designation would ultimately need an act of Congress, so the current phase is simply about gathering public opinion.

Ridgepointe breaks ground on indoor golf building for A-State

Ridgepointe Country Club broke ground Friday on an indoor training building for the Arkansas State golf teams and the club's own members, with multiple putting and chipping areas and a common room. The club owns the building, the Red Wolves Foundation operates it under a privately funded lease, and A-State Athletics will use it at no cost under a separate agreement. Head coach Mike Hagen said it will help the programs when weather turns bad. The article did not give a cost; Ridgepointe general manager Brett Walster expects a grand opening in a few months, after about three and a half years of planning.

Christmas at the Park returns November 26

Christmas at the Park, the drive-through light show at Joe Mack Campbell Park, 600 Harry Drive, runs Thursday, November 26 through Wednesday, December 24, and for the first time it will also open on Christmas Eve. The half-mile-plus route carries more than 400,000 lights, including the 300-foot lighted tunnel, with new displays and a "Great Sloth" scavenger hunt for a weekly prize.

Drive-through-only nights cost $10 per vehicle; full-experience nights with Santa's Village cost $20 or $25 per vehicle depending on the date. The village adds Santa visits, a train ride, a petting zoo, crafts and this year a mechanical bull and inflatables. Hours are on christmasattheparknea.com.

Community Thanksgiving Meal turns 30

The Jonesboro Community Thanksgiving Meal, organized by Barbara Sanders, serves from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Thanksgiving Day, November 26, at the St. Bernards Auditorium, 505 E. Washington Ave., or until the food runs out. Volunteers need no sign-up and should show up at 9:30 a.m. to deliver meals, fill trays, wash dishes or sit with diners who would otherwise eat alone; the meal also needs store-bought or homemade non-refrigerated desserts in disposable containers.

Deliveries to Jonesboro addresses can be reserved online through November 24 or until 1,700 meals are claimed, with six meals per address; call 870-790-0624 before noon Wednesday, November 25, or 870-336-2358 on Thanksgiving Day. The Rock Jonesboro will hand out blankets and coats.

Around town

A-State Theatre stages "Little Shop of Horrors" November 13–22. The original Red Ranger, Austin St. John, visits Jonesboro December 18. A-State men's basketball hosts UT Martin Tuesday at 7 p.m.

From the Police Reports

Eight incident reports from Thursday evening through Friday morning were read for this item; five people were arrested in them.

Thursday evening. A crash with severe injuries involved a tractor-trailer and a passenger car near East Highland and Gulley; the report lists careless and prohibited driving and shows no arrest. On Cricket Lane, a commercial delivery van struck a flower planter in a yard and left, a misdemeanor leaving-the-scene report (property damage only). A juvenile is the suspect in a criminal mischief report involving a broken apartment window in the 72404 area.

Overnight. Just after midnight, two people were arrested in a 72401-area household incident; the charges listed were third-degree domestic battery, driving while intoxicated and refusal to submit to a chemical test. In the 72404 area a family-member assault report involving a juvenile led to one arrest. At the Lacy Drive and Mahon Drive crossing, a pickup struck a train car and the driver was trapped; one man was arrested on a second-degree criminal mischief charge. A man was also arrested on an out-of-state warrant.

Friday morning. A pickup valued between $5,000 and $25,000 was reported stolen overnight from Pratt Circle, a felony theft report.

Tip: lock vehicles and take the keys, even at home overnight.

At the county jails

The Craighead County jail was holding 299 people on Sunday morning, 25 of them booked in the last 48 hours; among those listed first, the charges were mostly public intoxication, drug possession, failure-to-appear warrants and a few domestic or battery counts. The Randolph County jail in Pocahontas held 64, with four bookings in the last two days and nine releases in the same period; the newest charges included public intoxication, drug possession, a warrant and one felony domestic battery. Being on a roster does not mean a person was convicted.

From the State

What is in the governor's budget, and who is pushing back

Following Friday's budget presentation, the details show where the money would go. Gov. Sarah Huckabee Sanders proposed a nearly $7 billion budget for the coming year, up from $6.7 billion, and promised a fifth round of income tax cuts if lawmakers approve. The state's finance secretary, Jim Hudson, said it would still leave a $449 million surplus, and the state ended last year with a $655 million surplus and about $4 billion in reserves.

The plan adds $70 million for school vouchers, bringing that program above $379 million, and $20 million a year for early childhood education. For Medicaid, which covers more than 800,000 Arkansans and faces federal cuts of $900 billion over ten years under last year's federal tax and spending law, it sets aside $150 million for administration plus one-time money, and $34 million for supportive living services for families of people with complex disabilities. It also puts $25 million toward higher SNAP (food stamp) administrative costs and $50 million aside for a possible state share of benefits, since states with error rates above 6 percent, which Arkansas has consistently had, must pay at least 5 percent of benefit costs from fiscal 2028.

Arkansas Advocates for Children and Families praised the early-childhood, Medicaid and SNAP money but called the plan light on details and opposed more tax cuts; House Democratic leader Rep. Andrew Collins said it "falls far short." The politics have also shifted: Democrats gained 10 House seats Tuesday, ending the Republican supermajority, so most budget bills now need bipartisan votes. Sen. Jimmy Hickey, who has opposed the governor on several issues, was chosen Senate co-chair of the Joint Budget Committee, and Sen. Joshua Bryant of Rogers was elected Senate president after deadlocked votes. Lawmakers take up the budget next year; the Trump administration has said Arkansas's Medicaid expansion stays in effect through the first half of 2027 while the state considers a new model.

Teen arrested after 100-mph chase; passenger sought

Arkansas State Police arrested a 16-year-old driver early Saturday after a chase on Interstate 40 in North Little Rock that began about 12:50 a.m. over a stolen car linked to a shooting in Forrest City. Speeds topped 100 mph before the car crashed near the I-40 and I-30 interchange; the driver and a passenger ran, and police say the passenger, described as armed and dangerous, was still at large in woods north of the interstate. No charges had been announced, and the story was still developing.

From the Nation

Democrats take the Senate as two races stay open

CBS News projects Democrats will hold at least 54 Senate seats in January, with flips in Texas, South Carolina, Kansas, Maine, Iowa, Ohio and North Carolina, and projects they will also control the House, with an estimated 256 seats against 214 in the current Congress. Two Senate races remain open. In Mississippi, Democrat Scott Colom led Republican Sen. Cindy Hyde-Smith by roughly 2,000 to 2,500 votes with a few thousand mail and thousands of provisional ballots outstanding; counties must certify by November 13, and the state has no automatic recount. A Colom win would be the first Democratic Senate victory there since 1982. In Alaska, Democrat Mary Peltola narrowly leads Sen. Dan Sullivan, with updates due November 10, 13 and 18.

Democrats have outlined plans for investigations, with incoming House Oversight chair Rep. Robert Garcia citing Trump family business dealings and immigration enforcement, and Sen. Chuck Schumer promising to "take him to court" if the president defies the law. Mr. Trump said he would get along with Democrats unless they are "destructive," and noted he holds the veto.

Judge halts work on Trump's 250-foot arch

U.S. District Judge Tanya Chutkan blocked any construction on the president's proposed triumphal arch for 14 days, within about an hour of the National Capital Planning Commission's 8-4 vote on Thursday to approve final plans. The 250-foot arch would stand at Memorial Circle, across the Potomac from the Lincoln Memorial, topped by gilded figures and containing an observation deck. Judge Chutkan wrote that the plaintiffs, a group of Vietnam veterans plus Virginia and the District of Columbia in a separate suit, are likely to show the government skipped required legal steps. The Justice Department argues the plaintiffs lack standing; the White House says it expects to be "fully vindicated." The cost and funding source remain unclear.

From Abroad

Israel: Eisenkot is asked to form a government

Israeli President Isaac Herzog on Saturday asked Gadi Eisenkot, a former military chief of staff who heads the Yashar party, to try to build a governing coalition, a setback for Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu after the October election. Netanyahu's bloc lost its majority, but Eisenkot's did not win one either, and Netanyahu's Likud remains the largest single party, while Arab-led parties made historic gains and could be kingmakers. Eisenkot has up to six weeks. His options are a broad unity government, which is complicated by disputes over draft exemptions for ultra-Orthodox men and a formal inquiry into the October 7 failures, or a minority government with outside support from Arab parties, which some in his own bloc oppose.

Ukraine: talks Tuesday in Abu Dhabi after strikes

Russian missiles wounded at least nine people across Ukraine on Saturday and damaged energy sites in the Kyiv and Zhytomyr regions, according to reports; Kyiv's mayor said the capital's heating and water supply was in an extremely difficult state. Russia said it targeted a missile production plant, a power station and an ammunition factory. The strikes came days before US-brokered talks among Russian, Ukrainian and American negotiators in Abu Dhabi on November 10–11, the first three-way meeting since February. President Trump has called a settlement "very close" but has released no terms.

Iran: a new task force on land routes

US Central Command, which oversees American forces in the Middle East, announced Task Force Iron Gate on Saturday to cut Iran's land and Caspian Sea supply routes, extending a months-long naval blockade. Central Command said a US aircraft disabled the cargo ship M/V Huda in the Gulf of Oman and that since July it has redirected 147 vessels and disabled five. Mr. Trump confirmed "minor" strikes on Qeshm Island, Iranian media reported blasts at several southern sites, and Iran said two tankers hit sea mines near the Strait of Hormuz. Qatari-mediated talks are reported to be continuing.

Markets & the Farm

Figures are as of Friday's close, November 6; markets are closed on weekends.

Index	Close	Change	Week
S&P 500	7,376.86	+0.31%	−2.68%
Dow Jones Industrials	51,285.73	−0.46%	−0.94%
Nasdaq Composite	24,579.42	+1.09%	−3.37%

Stocks steadied Friday after Thursday's sell-off in artificial-intelligence and chip shares, which pushed the Nasdaq into a correction (a drop of more than 10 percent from its high), and the week still ended lower for all three averages. Next week brings more earnings and economic reports for investors to weigh.

What analysts are saying

The names below come from Thursday's rating changes, the latest day with a full list available. Analysts leaned toward buying:

- First Solar (FSLR), a US maker of solar panels. William Blair raised it to Outperform (buy-leaning) from Market Perform after the midterm results. Risk: the call leans on policy and the political outlook, which can change. (Single source: headline-level reports.)
- JetBlue (JBLU), a US airline. Deutsche Bank upgraded it to Buy from Hold and raised its price target by about 83 percent, citing an improving backdrop for the airline. Risk: airlines are sensitive to fuel prices, which are swinging with the Iran conflict.

Analysts turned cautious:

- Nike (NKE), the sportswear maker. Truist cut it to Sell from Hold. Risk to the call: a stronger-than-expected recovery in sales would undercut it. (Reasons not available in the sources read; single source: Daily Trade Alert.)
- Cisco (CSCO), the networking-equipment company. Morgan Stanley lowered it to Equal Weight from Overweight. Risk to the call: strong demand tied to AI spending could prove it too cautious. (Reasons not available in the sources read.)

This is information, not advice; analysts are often wrong.

On the Field

Arkansas State football lost 19-17 to Louisiana-Monroe (ULM) at home on Saturday, according to the Associated Press: a 40-yard field goal by ULM's Murray and a late interception by Howard sealed it. The Red Wolves fall to 4-5 overall and 2-3 in the Sun Belt Conference; ULM improves to 2-7. A-State had won 15 straight in the series before losing last season. The schedule ahead lists Coastal Carolina, Louisiana Tech and a trip to Troy; dates were not confirmed in the sources checked.

Arkansas football lost 26-23 at Auburn on Saturday night after squandering a second-half lead, reports said, and drops to 3-6 overall. The Razorbacks host South Carolina on November 14 in Fayetteville, with the kickoff time to be announced.

Tennessee football beat Kentucky at Neyland Stadium in a homecoming game, local TV reports said, and visits Texas A&M on November 14, time to be set. A-State men's basketball fell 101-86 at No. 20 Alabama on Friday night; Layne Taylor scored 20 and Amadou Doumbia had 11 points and 10 rebounds. The Red Wolves (1-1) host UT Martin on Tuesday at 7 p.m. (ESPN+). A-State volleyball beat Louisiana Tech in four sets on Friday.

Afield & Afloat

Ratings are rule-of-thumb estimates from the forecast, the rut calendar and the sun, not measurements of animal or fish behavior.

Deer outlook: Good

The rut is in its peak window, and a cold, still dawn near 36 degrees is the best setup of the week so far. Movement should be best from first light at 6:02 a.m. for about two hours, again from 3 p.m. to sunset at 5:00, and through the middle of the day, when bucks cruise looking for does; 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. is realistic.

Today's tip: the youth modern-gun weekend ends today, so keep young hunters comfortable with a ground blind or a sheltered stand and hand warmers for the cold start. With light winds (under 5 mph) in the morning, keep your scent downwind of the trail you expect deer to use, and consider sitting a travel corridor between bedding cover and a food plot or acorn flat rather than the plot itself.

Tomorrow, Monday (estimate: Good): dawn near 40 and a warm, sunny afternoon near 68, with light wind. The all-day rut sit still pays; first light is about 6:03 a.m., and the evening window opens around 3 p.m., closing at sunset, 4:59. Tomorrow's tip: warm afternoons slow daytime movement, so favor the first two hours of morning and stay on stand through lunch if you can.

Fishing outlook: Good

On Craighead Forest Lake and Lake Frierson, steady pressure and a warm afternoon near 61 degrees make a good day. Fish late morning through mid-afternoon as the shallows warm, with a second window in the last hour before sunset at 5:00 p.m.

Today's tip: after the cold snap the crappie may sit a bit deeper over brush piles at 6 to 10 feet; try small minnows or 1/16-ounce jigs fished slowly, and look for bream and bass to move shallow in the afternoon sun on the sunny side of the lake.

Tomorrow, Monday (estimate: Good): steady pressure and a warm afternoon near 68 degrees. Fish late morning through mid-afternoon, with a second window in the last hour before sunset at 4:59 p.m. Tomorrow's tip: as the water warms, try a slow-rolled spinnerbait or a lipless crankbait along riprap and shallow points for bass.

In season now, and what is next (zones 3, 4, 6 and 8)

Zone	Archery	Youth gun	Modern gun	Muzzleloader
3	open to Feb. 28	Nov. 7–8	Nov. 14–Dec. 6; Dec. 26–28	Dec. 12–14
4	open to Feb. 28	Nov. 7–8	Nov. 14–22; Dec. 26–28	closed
6	open to Feb. 28	Nov. 7–8	Nov. 14–Dec. 6; Dec. 26–28	Dec. 12–14
8	open to Feb. 28	Nov. 7–8	Nov. 14–Dec. 6; Dec. 26–28	Dec. 12–14

This weekend: the youth modern-gun hunt ends today in all four zones, and archery season stays open. Next week: modern gun opens Saturday, November 14, in all four zones; Zone 4, which includes Craighead County, closes November 22 while Zones 3, 6 and 8 run to December 6.

Other seasons: snow, blue, Ross's and white-fronted geese close today, November 8; duck season opens November 21 and runs November 21–29, December 10–23 and December 26 to January 31. Check agfc.com before heading out for anything not listed here.

The Week in Review

Locally, the City Council voted 10 to 0 to bar camping in city parks and parking lots, a Jonesboro man received a 60-year sentence in a child sexual abuse material case, police continued to investigate a fatal shooting on Preakness Drive, a century-old bank building burned in Trumann, and Black Rock voters rejected a sales tax. Jonesboro Public Schools teachers received $75,000 in classroom grants, and the Christmas season announcements began.

In the state, Gov. Sarah Huckabee Sanders won a second term, Democrats broke the Republican supermajority in the state House, Issue 3 failed, and the governor presented a budget near $7 billion. A former bar-exam official was charged with altering scores, and the attorney general announced $8.4 million from the Monsanto settlement for water projects.

Nationally, Democrats won the House and Senate, Stephen Miller was named White House chief of staff, a judge paused Trump's arch, and a Thursday sell-off in AI-related stocks sent the Nasdaq into a correction. Abroad, Israel's president tapped Gadi Eisenkot to try to form a government, and US-mediated Ukraine talks were set for Abu Dhabi.

In sports, the Red Wolves and the Razorbacks both lost on Saturday, while Tennessee won. The week ahead: A-State basketball hosts UT Martin Tuesday at 7 p.m., and the Razorbacks host South Carolina and Tennessee visits Texas A&M on November 14.

After a week of elections, rulings and sell-offs, it is worth remembering that most of what holds a community together happens quietly: a teacher gets a grant, a church fills a table, a neighbor shows up at 9:30 with a pan of dessert. The loud news fades; the small kindnesses keep.

Postscript

The Last Pecans

Walter Pruitt had owned the pecan tree longer than he had owned the house, or so he liked to tell people, though the deed said otherwise. Each November it dropped a hundred pounds of nuts on his side of the fence and, by his reckoning, another hundred on the neighbor's.

The neighbor, a retired schoolteacher named Opal Hargrove, never quite agreed to those numbers. Every autumn the two of them stooped in the leaves on either side of the fence, filling buckets and pretending not to watch each other. Every autumn Walter would say, "That one rolled over to your side fair and square," and Opal would say, "Rules are rules," and neither one of them could have told you which rules.

This year Walter's knees had grown stubborn and the buckets stayed in the shed. On the first cold Saturday he sat on the porch with a blanket and watched the leaves come down and the nuts with them, and he found he minded the quiet more than the knees. Around ten there was a rattle at the gate. Opal stood there with a bucket in each hand, and a pie dish balanced on one of them.

"I picked up your side," she said. "Mine rolled over a good bit this year."

"That is not how it works," said Walter, but he made room on the porch bench anyway.

They shelled nuts until the light went amber, and somewhere in the second pot of coffee they agreed that the tree, which had never read the deed, had been feeding them both all along. Opal left the pie. Walter left the gate unlatched.

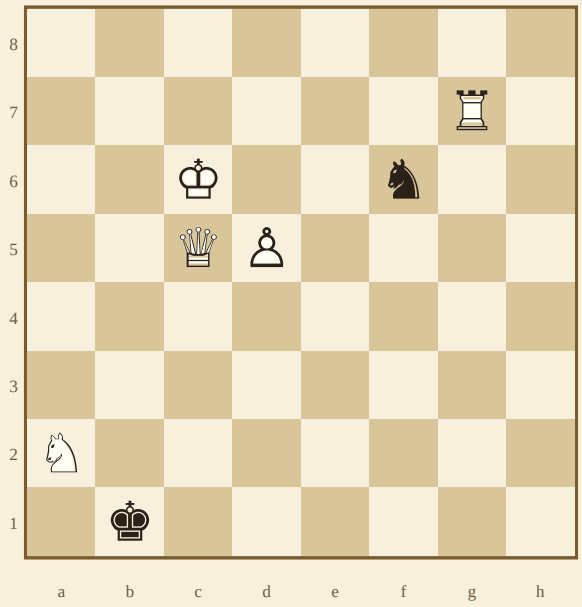

The next morning, he found two full buckets on his step, and one small note in careful teacher's handwriting: "Rolled over."

Until tomorrow, with good wishes —
